Elizabeth Jaeger is a an artist working in Brooklyn. She has held solo exhibitions at Jack Hanley Gallery in New York and at And Now in Dallas, and has exhibited in group shows nationally and internationally. Additionally, she co-runs the publishing group Peradam, which specializes in perfect bound artist books.

Jaeger's jam-packed Consumer Report takes her from Northern California to Alaska for a polyamorous wedding. Despite a self-imposed social media ban, she manages to consume all sorts of media, from the Sculpture and Touch collection of essays to Cam'ron's aughts rap classic Killa Season. Also: an Alaskan Tinder scene report, which contains many men holding fish. All this and much more, below. —John Chiaverina
